PETITION FOR WRITS OF CERTIORARI

To the Honorable, the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court:

The petition of Societa Anonima Cooperativa di Navigazione Garibaldi and "Italia"—Societa Anonima di Navigazione, respectfully alleges and propounds as follows:

Preliminary Statement

Since the facts in all of the causes above entitled are in all substantial respects identical and since all four causes were briefed and heard together in each court below—the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey and the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit—on a statement of the facts involved in the third above-entitled cause and were in each court covered by one opinion, the petitioners herein, for the purpose of brevity, confine the following petition to a discussion of the facts, rulings below, questions, specifications of error and reasons for review as the same are to be found in the said cause third above-entitled; but respectfully request that such discussion be deemed to apply to, and set forth, with the like force and effect, the facts, rulings below, questions, specifications of error and reasons for review involved in each of the three other causes.

A

Summary Statement of Matter Involved.

1

Your petitioner, "Italia"—Societa Anonima di Navigazione, claimant in the third above-entitled cause, as also in the second and fourth, is a corporation of the Kingdom of Italy with an office and place of business in the City of Genoa therein, and on and before March 28, 1941, was the sole owner of the Italian Steamship "Aussa", and still is the sole owner thereof save in so far as such ownership has been lost by reason of the events described hereinbelow.

On March 30, 1941 (R. 20a),* the libellant by its Secretary of the Treasury, purporting to act by authority of Title II, art. 1, of the Act of June 15, 1917 (40 Stat. 220; 50 U. S. C. A., c. 12, sec. 191)† seized the "Aussa" and took her into its protective custody.

* This and similar notations refer to pages of that part of the printed transcript of record filed herein which below constituted the appendix to appellant's brief.

† Title II, sections 1-4, of the Act, as set out in 50 U. S. C. A., c. 12, secs. 191-4, reads as follows:

"TITLE 50.

"WAR

* * *

"Section 191. Secretary of Treasury and Governor of Canal Zone authorized to regulate anchorage, movement, and so forth, of vessels. Whenever the President by proclamation or Executive order declares a national emergency to exist by reason of actual or threatened war, insurrection, or invasion, or disturbance or threatened disturbance of the international relations of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury may make, subject to the approval of the President, rules and regulations governing the anchorage and movement of any vessel, foreign or domestic, in the territorial waters of the United States, may inspect such vessel at any time, place guards thereon, and, if necessary in his opinion in order to secure such vessels from damage or injury, or to prevent damage or injury to any harbor or waters of the United States, or to secure the observance of the rights and obligations of the United States, may take, by and with the consent of the President, for such purposes, full possession and control of such vessel and remove therefrom the officers and crew thereof and all other persons not specially authorized by him to go or remain on board thereof.

"Within the territory and waters of the Canal Zone the Governor of the Panama Canal, with the approval of the President, shall exercise all the powers conferred by this section on the Secretary of the Treasury.

"§192. Seizure and forfeiture of vessels for failure to observe regulations. If any owner, agent, master, officer, or person in charge, or any member of the crew of any such vessel fails to comply with any regulation or rule issued or order given under the provisions of this title, or obstructs or interferes with the exercise of any power conferred by this chapter, the vessel, together with her tackle, apparel, furniture, and equipment, shall be subject to seizure and forfeiture to the United States in the same manner as merchandise is forfeited

On July 16, 1941, the United States filed a libel in rem against the said steamer "Aussa" in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey to the end of having her declared forfeit to the United States under the provisions of Title II, sec. 3, of the Act of Congress of June 15, 1917 (infra, n.), on the ground that on said March 28, 1941, and prior to the libellant's said original seizure of the vessel for protective custody, "the owners, agent, master, officer, person in charge, and certain members of the crew * * * within the territorial waters of the United States, with the knowledge of the owners and master, wilfully did cause or permit the injury and destruction of the vessel, her engines, boilers and machinery, tackle, apparel, furniture and equipment and did knowingly permit said vessel to be used as a place of

for violation of the customs revenue laws; and the person guilty of such failure, obstruction, or interference shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than ten years, and may, in the discretion of the court, be fined not more than $10,000.

"§193. Destruction of, injury to, or improper use of vessels. It shall be unlawful for the owner or master or any other person in charge or command of any private vessel, foreign or domestic, or for any member of the crew or other person, within the territorial waters of the United States, willfully to cause or permit the destruction or injury of such vessel or knowingly to permit said vessel to be used as a place of resort for any person conspiring with another or preparing to commit any offense against the United States, or in violation of the treaties of the United States or of the obligations of the United States under the law of nations, or to defraud the United States, or knowingly to permit such vessels to be used in violation of the rights and obligations of the United States under the law of nations; and in case such vessels shall be so used, with the knowledge of the owner or master or other person in charge or command thereof, the vessel, together with her tackle, apparel, furniture, and equipment, shall be subject to seizure and forfeiture to the United States in the same manner as merchandise is forfeited for violation of the customs revenue laws; and whoever violates this section shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than ten years and shall, in the discretion of the court, be fined not more than $10,000."

"§194. Employment of Army and Navy to enforce provisions of chapter. The president may employ such part of the land or naval forces of the United States as he may deem necessary to carry out the purpose of this chapter."

resort for person or persons conspiring with another or preparing to commit offenses against the United States * * * and of the rights and obligations of the United States under the law of nations, and in fraud of the United States" (R. 2a).

The libel further alleged that the said vessel, within the territorial waters of the Port of New York, on July 15, 1941, while still in libellant's protective custody, as aforesaid, had been a second time seized by libellant (that is, by its Collector of Customs of the Port of New York) for condemnation and forfeiture for the said alleged crime, and had since remained in the Collector's possession or custody (R. 2a); named said claimant, "Italia"—Societa Anonima di Navigazione, as the Corporation in whose name the vessel was registered and duly documented under the laws of the Government of Italy; prayed the issuance of process in rem against the said vessel and a monition to all parties in interest to appear upon the return day and show cause why condemnation and forfeiture should not be decreed for the reason aforesaid; and further prayed the entry of a decree condemning the said vessel "as forfeited to the United States" (R. 1a, 3a).

The in rem process was issued accordingly (R. 4a); a copy of the same was posted upon the said vessel on July 17, 1941 (R. 6a); and on the same day a copy of said process was delivered in the Hudson County Jail at Jersey City, New Jersey, to Armenio Scalleggeri, as her master (R. 6a).

5

On August 8, 1941, your said petitioner filed a claim to the said steamer "Aussa", in which it alleged that your said petitioner is her true and bona fide owner and her said master her true and lawful bailee on behalf of her owner, and prayed to be admitted to defend accordingly (R. 7a-8a). And in the same behalf on September 3, 1941, exceptions to the libel were filed on the grounds, among others, that the allegations of the libel were insufficient (R. 11a, 12a, 13a); charged no act that would subject the vessel to seizure and forfeiture (R. 11a, 12a) and, instead, showed her seizure to have been unfounded, void, illegal and in violation of the owner's rights, because in violation of the Fifth Amendment of the Federal Constitution and because based upon claimed violations of law, as alleged in the libel, that were wholly insufficient (R. 11a, 12a, 13a); and failed to state a cause within the District Court's Admiralty and Maritime jurisdiction (R. 14a).

6

On October 15, 1941, (R. 2a, cross),* with the action still pending as aforesaid, libellant filed a petition in the District Court, alleging that the President, through the Maritime Commission, and, on September 11, 1941, by authority of the Act of Congress of June 6, 1941 (55 Stat. 242; 50 U. S. C. A., App. sec. 1271),† had requisitioned for

 " * * * during the existence of the national emergency declared by the President on September 8, 1939, * * * the President is authorized and empowered, through such agency or officer as he shall designate, to purchase, requisition, for any period during such emergency, charter or requisition the use of, or take over the title to, or the possession of, for such use or disposition as he shall direct, any foreign merchant vessel which is lying idle in waters within the jurisdiction of the United States, * * * and which is necessary to the national defense: Provided, That just compensation shall be determined and made to the owner or owners of any such vessel in accordance with the applicable provisions of section 902 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended:"‡

‡ Section 902 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936 (49 Stat. 2015, as amended; 46 U. S. C. A., sec. 1242), authorizing the President to requisition, national purposes, as provided in said act, the use of the said vessel as "a foreign merchant vessel then lying idle in waters of the United States" and praying the entry of an

during an emergency, vessel-tonnage owned or under construction in the United States, further provided in sub-section (a) :

"When any such property or the use thereof is so requisitioned, the owner thereof shall be paid just compensation for the property taken or for the use of such property, * * *. If any property is taken and used under authority of this section, but the ownership thereof is not required by the United States, such property shall be restored to the owner in a condition at least as good as when taken less ordinary wear and tear, or the owner shall be paid an amount for reconditioning sufficient to place the property in such condition."

Sub-section (c) of the said sec. 902 (46 U. S. C. A., sec. 1242), providing that the requisition of a steamer's use, not title, should take the form of a charter as soon as the exigencies of the situation might permit, declared :

"If any property is taken and used under authority of this section, but the ownership thereof is not required by the United States, the Commission, at the time of the taking or as soon thereafter as the exigencies of the situation may permit, shall transmit to the person entitled to the possession of such property a charter setting forth the terms which, in the Commission's judgment, should govern the relations between the United States and such person and a statement of the rate of hire which, in the Commission's judgment, will be just compensation for the use of such property and for the services required under the terms of such charter. If such person does not execute and deliver such charter and accept such rate of hire, the Commission shall pay to such person on account of just compensation a sum equal to 75 per centum of such rate of hire as the same may from time to time be due under the terms of the charter so tendered, and such person shall be entitled to sue the United States to recover such further sum as added to such 75 per centum will make up such amount as will be just compensation for the use of the property and for the services required in connection with such use. In the event of loss or damage to such property, due to operation of a risk assumed by the United States under the terms of a charter prescribed in this subsection, but no valuation of such vessel or other property or mode of compensation has been agreed to, the United States shall pay just compensation for such loss or damage, to the extent the person entitled thereto is not reimbursed therefor through policies of insurance against such loss or damage."

And sub-section (d) of the said sec. 902 (46 U. S. C. A., sec. 1242) further provided :

"In all cases, the just compensation authorized by this section shall be determined and paid by the Commission as soon as practicable, but if the amount of just compensation determined by the Commission is unsatisfactory to the person entitled thereto, such person shall be paid 75 per centum of the amount so determined and shall be entitled to sue the United States to recover such further sum as, added to said 75 per centum will make up such amount as will be just compensation therefor, in the manner provided for by sections 41 (20) and 250 of Title 28" (The Tucker Act, March 3, 1887, c. 359, 24 Stat. 505, as amended).

order directing the Marshal of the Court and the Collector of Customs to comply with the Maritime Commission's Notice of Taking attached to and made a part of libellant's said petition, but without prejudice to libellant's rights in the forfeiture suit or under the said Act of June 6, 1941, the Court retaining its custody and jurisdiction of the vessel in said suit (R. 20a-21a).

The Notice of Taking, so attached and made a part of the said petition, was dated September 9, 1941; was addressed to "the Owner or Owners of the Vessel (and all persons claiming an interest therein)"; and set forth that the Maritime Commission, pursuant to the said Act of June 6, 1941, "has taken over the possession and use of the above named Vessel, including all tackle, apparel, furniture, spare parts, gear and equipment, and all stores and supplies, including fuel, aboard the Vessel, effective on September 11, 1941, at 12 o'clock, noon, Eastern Standard Time, under and subject to the Terms and Conditions of the Taking, Use and Disposition of the Vessel, a copy of which will be promptly furnished."

The said Notice of Taking did not purport, however, that such taking was without prejudice to the rights of the libellant "under any executive seizure of, or forfeiture proceedings against, said vessel, heretofore or hereafter effected or instituted";* and promised finally and unconditionally that

"Compensation for such taking will be determined and made in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid Act" (said Act of Congress of June 6, 1941) (R. 23a).

* In this respect the Notice of Taking differed from that given in the case of The Antoinetta, No. — here.

On October 15, 1941, the District Court entered an order directing its Marshal and the Collector of Customs to comply with the said Notice of Taking, subject to the proviso that the said order and all action taken pursuant thereto should be "without prejudice to the continued custody" of the District Court over the said vessel "or to the rights of any of the parties libellant in the pending proceeding, or under said Act of June 6, 1941, the Court at all times retaining the custody and jurisdiction of said vessel in each of said proceedings" (R. 17a).

The order further permitted the Marshal to make a Special Deputy Marshal out of the Master or other person having custody of the vessel, and directed that in such custody he deliver it to the Maritime Commission for the purposes of said requisition, but that said Special Deputy Marshal or his substitute should always remain in possession of the vessel, and that the same should be returned to the custody of the Marshal on being released from requisition by the Maritime Commission (R. 17a-18a).

On July 30, 1942, the libellant, acting through the Alien Property Custodian, filed a second petition (R. 24a), alleging inter alia that the claimant of said vessel, your said petitioner, was an enemy without a license (R. 25a), and that the Custodian, purporting to act under the alleged authority of the Trading with the Enemy Act of October 6, 1917, c. 106 (40 Stat. 411; 50 U.S.C.A., App.)* as

"§3. Acts prohibited. It shall be unlawful—

"(a) For any person in the United States, except with the license of the President, granted to such person, or to the enemy, or ally of enemy, as provided in this Act, to trade, or attempt to trade, either directly or indirectly, with, to, or from, or for, or on account of, or on behalf of, or for the benefit of, any other person, with knowledge or reasonable cause to believe that such other person is an enemy or ally of enemy, or is conducting or taking part in such trade, directly or indirectly, for, or on account of, or on behalf of, or for the benefit of, an enemy or ally of enemy.

"§5. * * *. "The sole relief and remedy of any person having any claim to any money or other property * * * seized by him shall be that provided by the terms of this Act, * * *

"§9. * * * (a) Any person not an enemy or ally of enemy claiming any interest, right, or title, in any * * * property * * * seized by him" (the Alien Property Custodian) "hereunder and held by him * * * or to whom any debt may be owing from an enemy * * * whose property or any part thereof shall have been * * * delivered, or paid to the Alien Property Custodian or seized by him hereunder * * * may file with the said custodian a notice of his claim under oath and in such form and containing such particulars as the said custodian shall require; and the President, if application is made therefor by the claimant, may order the payment, conveyance, transfer, assignment, or delivery to said claimant of * * * property so held by the Alien Property Custodian * * * or of the interest therein to which the President shall determine said claimant is entitled * * *. If the President shall not so order within sixty days after the filing of such application or if the claimant shall have filed the notice as above required and shall have made no application to the President, said claimant may institute a suit in equity in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia or in the district court of the United States for the district in which such claimant resides, * * * to establish the interest, right, title, or debt so claimed, and if so established the court shall order the payment, conveyance, transfer, * * * or delivery to said claimant of the money or other property so held by the Alien Property Custodian * * * or the interest therein to which the court shall determine said claimant is entitled."

The first sentence of section 5(b) of the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended by the First War Powers Act, December 18, 1941, c. 593, Title III, sec. 301 (55 Stat. 839; 50 U. S. C. A., App., sec. 616), reads as follows:

R. 2759)* or any amendment thereof,

"10. * * * (a). * * * For the purpose of this Executive Order any determination by the Alien Property Custodian that any property or interest of any foreign country or national thereof is the property or interest of a designated enemy country or national thereof shall be final and conclusive as to the power of the Alien Property Custodian to exercise any of the power or authority conferred upon me by section 5(b) of the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended."

* This Executive Order, dated June 6, 1941, reads as follows:

"Whereas Section 1 of the Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to authorize the acquisition by the United States of title to or the use of domestic or foreign merchant vessels for urgent needs of commerce and national defense, and for other purposes,' approved June 6, 1941, provides, in part:

* * * during the existence of the national emergency declared by the President on September 8, 1939, to exist, but not after June 30, 1942, the President is authorized and empowered, through such agency or officer as he shall designate, to purchase, requisition, for any period during such emergency charter or requisition the use of, or take over the title to, or the possession of, for such use or disposition as he shall direct, any foreign merchant vessel which is lying idle in waters within the jurisdiction of the United States, including the Philippine Islands and the Canal Zone, and which is necessary to the national defense * * *.

"And whereas I find that the foreign merchant vessels now lying idle in waters within the jurisdiction of the United States, including the Philippine Islands and the Canal Zone, are necessary to the national defense:

"Now, Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me by the aforesaid act, it is hereby ordered as follows:

1. The United States Maritime Commission (hereinafter called the 'Commission') is hereby authorized and empowered, at such time or to continue, modify or revoke any arrangements thereofore made by them in respect to the vessel (R. 30a-31a);

 alleging further that

“Nothing in this order” (Vesting Order No. 52)
 “shall be construed as recognizing that Claimants, or any of them, have any right, title or interest in said vessels. This order and all action taken pursuant thereto is in strict subordination to the rights of the United States including rights of forfeiture and salvage rights. It is the intention of this order to effect a complete substitution of the Alien Property Custodian for Claimants, and each of them, in respect of any right, title or interest they, or any of them, may have in any or all of said vessels” (R. 31a);

or times and upon such terms and conditions as the Commission shall deem desirable and conducive to the national defense, to purchase, requisition, charter, requisition the use of, or take over the title to, or the possession of, any or all foreign merchant vessels which are lying idle in waters within the jurisdiction of the United States, including the Philippine Islands and the Canal Zone, including all tackle, apparel, furniture, spare parts and equipment, and all stores, including fuel, aboard such vessels or appertaining thereto, for the use and disposition hereinafter directed.

2. Without limiting the authority of the Commission under the provisions of sections 3, 4 and 5 of said Act of Congress or under any other provision of law, the Commission is authorized and directed, to such extent and upon such terms and conditions as the Commission shall deem desirable and conducive to the national defense:

(a) To operate any or all of such vessels, either directly or by agent, in any service of the United States, or in any commerce, foreign or coastwise.

(b) To charter or lease any or all of such vessels to any persons for operation in any service of the United States, or in any commerce, foreign or coastwise: Provided, that no vessel shall be transferred, chartered, or leased to any belligerent government without the approval of the President.

(c) To document any or all of such vessels under the laws of the United States or any neutral country of the Western Hemisphere.

(d) To make such other use or disposition of any or all of such vessels as the President may hereafter direct.

(e) To repair, equip, and man such vessels and to do whatever may be necessary to accomplish the purposes of the said act or this order.

3. The Commission is directed to determine and make to the owner or owners of any vessel taken in accordance with the provisions hereof, just compensation for such vessel, or the use thereof, in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid act.

and alleging further that by reason of the premises there had been "effected a complete substitution of petitioner for the Claimant in respect of such right, title or interest, if any, as the Claimant may have had in said vessel, and petitioner is entitled to be substituted as a party herein in the place and stead of the Claimant" (R. 26a).

And the prayer of the petition was (1) that the Custodian be substituted as party in place of said claimant; (2) that all claims, pleadings, motions or exceptions filed by said claimant be as to it dismissed, denied and overruled, without prejudice to the Custodian,—that said claimant

"be adjudged without any right, title or interest in said vessel and that such right, title and interest, if any, as the Claimant may have had therein prior to said Vesting Order be adjudged vested in petitioner",— and that all claims, pleadings, motions or exceptions filed by said claimant be ordered to stand of record for the Custodian's benefit, pending his having an opportunity to amend, supplement or "withdraw" the same as he might be advised; and (3) that leave be granted the Custodian so to amend, supplement or "withdraw" the said claims, pleadings, motions or exceptions, or to file such others as he might be advised (R. 26a-27a).

9

On the previous day, July 29, 1942, a notice of hearing on said petition having been filed, naming August 4, 1942, as the return date (R. 4a, cross), at that time (R. 4a, cross) said petition came on for hearing before the Honorable William F. Smith, United States District Judge, the same was orally argued, decision reserved and provision made for the filing of briefs (R. 4a, cross), with leave to your petitioner's counsel to file an answer to said petition within one week.

On August 11, 1942, your said petitioner filed its answer to the Custodian's said petition, denying the allegation that claimant had no license (R. 44a) and denying knowledge or information as to the allegation of what the Custodian had found or done, but alleging that, if true, it was immaterial and irrelevant to the Custodian's demands (R. 44a-45a), denying that the effect of what the Custodian was alleged to have found or done had been to work a substitution of Custodian for said claimant in respect to the latter's right, title, or interest, in respect to said vessel, or to entitle Custodian to be substituted as party in place of said claimant (R. 45a), and praying that said petition be denied in all respects (R. 45a).

On December 22, 1943, the said District Judge filed his opinion (R. 47a) holding in brief that the requisition of the "Aussa" under the Idle Foreign Vessels Act, if not alone, at least when combined with her alleged capture under the Trading with the Enemy Act, had destroyed the jurisdiction of the District Court by depriving it of a res to be tried.

On April 17, 1944, a decree was filed (R. 54a) pursuant to said opinion, dismissing the forfeiture suit for want of jurisdiction,

“but without prejudice to the right of claimants, mortgagees, or lienors, if any, to pursue their lawful remedy under the Act of June 6, 1941,” supra, 6 n., (R. 55a).

Pursuant to leave granted on July 14, 1944 (R. 61a), libellant appealed from said decree and said rulings to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit; and pursuant to the like leave, granted on July 17, 1944, (R. 16a, cross), your petitioner at the same time, in order to preserve its rights, lodged its cross-appeal to the same court. There, on March 30, 1945, the appeal and cross-appeal were heard on written and oral argument, resulting in an opinion of reversal filed on December 13, 1945, and based upon reasoning in substance the same as that announced by the Eastern Pennsylvania District Court in the case of The Antoinetta, No.                      here. And on December 21, 1945, a decree was filed reversing the decree appealed from (R.                      ). A petition for reargument, filed by your said petitioner within the prescribed time, was denied in an order filed on February 13, 1946 (R.                      ).

The statutory provision sustaining the jurisdiction here invoked is section 240 of the Judicial Code as amended (Act of March 3, 1911, c. 23, sec. 240, 36 Stat. 1157, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925, c. 229, sec. 1, 43 Stat. 938; 28 U. S. C. A., sec. 347).*

2

The date of the decree sought to be reviewed—final for your petitioner (Hill v. Chicago & Evanston Railroad Co., 140 U. S. 52)—is December 21, 1945 (R.     ), as to which a timely petition for reargument was denied by an order filed February 13, 1946 (R.     ); the date upon which this application for certiorari is presented is April 30, 1946.

C*The Questions Presented*1

Whether an alien enemy whose property has been assailed in court by the Federal Government and who has been cited to, and does, appear and undertake to defend the res, may by judicial decree be deprived thereof, unheard and without a trial.

* Section 240 of the Judicial Code, as amended and pertinent, reads as follows:

"In any case, civil or criminal, in a circuit court of appeals * * * it shall be competent for the Supreme Court of the United States upon the petition of any party thereto, whether Government or other litigant, to require by certiorari, either before or after a judgment or decree by such lower Court, that the cause be certified to the Supreme Court for determination by it with the same power and authority, and with like effect, as if the cause had been brought there by unrestricted writ of error or appeal."

2

Whether in such action the Federal Government can be heard to urge, at one and the same time, that it first acquired full title to the alien enemy's property in the res by forfeiture for crime and thereafter full title thereto by capture for enemy ownership, and that, by reason of such later capture, the alien enemy is barred from disputing such earlier forfeiture; and whether, having chosen to maintain its remedy of forfeiture, it is not barred, at least while still in pursuit of that remedy, from pursuing also the remedy of capture, and urging it in aid of the former remedy.

3

Whether the owner's property in a vessel whose use and possession, under the Idle Foreign Vessels Act, has been requisitioned, availed of and operated as chartered, by the Federal Government while the vessel's owner is still an alien friend, becomes, while still so possessed and operated, subject to capture under the Trading with the Enemy Act on that Government's going to war with its own.

Whether an alien enemy against whom and whose property relief is demanded in court by the Federal Government on the ground of having a captor's title thereto, may there question such title, and there defend against such demand, on the grounds (1) that the Trading with the Enemy Act is without application, and, even if it be not, (2) that under the laws of this country said property at all pertinent times has been and is immune to capture, (3) that at all said times its capture has been and is beyond the statutory and constitutional powers of its alleged captor, and (4) that the latter failed to perform the essential conditions precedent to the exercise of such statutory and constitutional powers of capture as it did possess; and, if such defense be permissible, whether its validity, the face of the record does not here make manifest, as showing said property (a) to have been without the purview of the Trading with the Enemy Act, and even if not, (b) to have been property to whose safe keeping for, and return, delivery and payment to the alien enemy, the public faith was plighted, (c) to have consisted solely in and of a contractual obligation and debt of the sovereign United States and (d) never to have been found, or found to be capturable as enemy property.

5

Whether such alien enemy, even though its property in the res had vanished following the Federal Government's said alleged capture, was not still possessed of a defensible interest entitling it to continue its defense against the same Government's assertion of title by forfeiture, in view of its continuing interest, by means of such defense, to preserve (1) its right to damages for a tortious seizure of its said property as forfeited and (2) the trusteeship of the alleged captor of its said property for the benefit of its American creditors.

Whether such alien enemy's defense against the assertion of title by forfeiture could in any event be assumed by such alleged captor itself, in view of the resulting identity of interest between pursuer and defender, entailing loss at least of the District Court's jurisdiction over the controversy as to said alien enemy's property, and either loss of such jurisdiction as to all others' property, or, in case of the latter's forfeiture, an unlawful remission of the penalty incurred by the former.

Whether, even prior to the striking of such alien enemy's appearance and defense against such libel, the court had acquired jurisdiction thereover, in view of the libel's failure to allege a covering statute of operative force and effect as of the time of the alleged offense or to allege an offense made ground of forfeiture by that or other statute; and, if so, whether the court retained jurisdiction over the cause following libellant's adoption of the remedy provided by the Idle Foreign Vessels Act, its requisition of said property as that of the alien enemy and its removal of the res from the possession, custody and control of the court.

Specifications of Error

Error is assigned to the decree and rulings of the Circuit Court of Appeals as follows:

1. In that they deprived your said petitioner of its property without due process of law and in violation of the guaranties of the Constitution (Fifth Am'd't.)* and laws of the country.

Said the Circuit Court of Appeals (R.       ):

“By this seizure the Custodian became invested with whatever right claimant had. It is, therefore, right and proper that the Custodian be substituted in the libel proceeding for the claimant since the latter has been irrevocably divested of all his interests.”

And the decree it approved of, after ordering “that all claims, pleadings, motions and exceptions heretofore filed

* “No person shall be * * * deprived of * * * property, without due process of law; * * *” on behalf of said claimant are hereby dismissed, denied and overruled as to said claimant," added that "it is

"Further Ordered, that said Claimant is hereby adjudged without any right, title or interest in the steam vessel 'Aussa'". * * * (R. 59a in The Antoinetta, No. here).

Petitioner contends that an alien enemy, though generally without a right to seek affirmative relief in our courts, is entitled, when it or its property is there assailed, there to defend the same and, in that connection, to make use of all the appliances and instrumentalities of defense; and that a decree depriving it of its property without such a trial is worthless for any purpose, save to defeat the court's jurisdiction ab initio.

2. In that they denied it the right to defend its property in court when the same was therein assailed by the Government, and, without a trial, determined its asserted property rights to be nonexistent.

The Government,—while litigating in the District Court, as libellant, its claim of title to the steam vessel "Aussa", including claimant's property therein, as forfeited to it for crime on March 28, 1941, and while said claimant, pursuant to citation, was there defending it as its property,—filed in the same Court, by its Alien Property Custodian, a second claim of title to claimant's interest in the res as enemy property captured by libellant on July 22, 1942; one year, that is, after it had commenced its suit to establish its title thereto as forfeited for crime. And, on the ground that claimant's title had thus, either by forfeiture, or by capture, been absolutely acquired by libellant not later than July 22, 1942, libellant demanded without a trial and the Court of Appeals without a trial approved of a decree dismissing from the cause said claimant, its appearance, and, as to it, its pleadings, substituting as claimant in its place the libellant itself, in the person of its Custodian, and adjudicating that claimant was without any right, title or interest in the res.

The theory upon which libellant demanded and the court ruled that claimant must be denied all rights of defense was that libellant's claim of capture was an actual, present, absolute claim,—not conditioned, as claimant urged, upon defeat of libellant's claim of forfeiture,—that its validity was not open to question by either court or claimant, and that, because of it, claimant was without a standing even to question the validity of libellant's claim of forfeiture.

Claimant's position was and is that, though an alien enemy, it had under the Constitution and laws of this country, a right to defend at the appropriate time, against both claims of the libellant—asserted, as they were, in court against its property.

3. In that they permitted and required the District Court, while trying the Government's claim of title to claimant's said property by forfeiture for crime, to entertain in court a new and contradictory claim of title by the Government, viz., that it had, in the midst of such litigation, captured claimant's title to said property for enemy ownership and thereby captured its right of defense in court against either claim.

Libellant's alleged capture, for enemy ownership, of claimant's property in the said vessel and just compensation for its value and use, was, if at all, effected on July 22, 1942, (R. 26a, 31a). But libellant was then, and for a year theretofore (R. 1a) had been, litigating in the District Court its claim that it already owned all such property through forfeiture for crime.

It is claimant's position that the District Court, at least while that litigation continued, was precluded from entertaining the new and contradictory claim of capture for enemy ownership (Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 331, 351; Norfolk Southern R. R. Co. v. Chatman, 244 U. S. 276, 281-282) and from recognizing or giving effect to any assertion of right predicated thereon (The Sally, 8 Cranch 382, 384; The Hampton, 5 Wall. 372, 376; The Gray Jacket, 5 Wall. 370, 371).

4. In that they allowed and required the District Court to permit libellant to pursue, in respect to the same res, the inconsistent remedies of forfeiture and capture, and did not bar pursuit of the latter remedy; at least while pursuit of the former was still on.

The two remedies of forfeiture and capture are wholly inconsistent: One being based upon title's being in the Government; the other, on its being in an enemy. Having elected the former, the libellant—petitioner urged and urges—is, at least while still pursuing the former, denied the latter (Van Winkle v. Crowell, 146 U. S. 42, 50-51; United States v. Oregon Lumber Co., 260 U. S. 290, 294-295).

5. In that, after entertaining such new claim of title by capture, they determined it to be an actual, present, and effective claim, not conditional on defeat of the Government's claim of title by forfeiture, nor, in advance of that event, moot and unavailable to the Government as ground for the assertion of any right in the litigation.

The Circuit Court held libellant's assertion of title to claimant's property by capture to be absolute and independent of its claim of title thereto by forfeiture, saying (R.     ):

"The rights of the Custodian, although asserted by him without prejudice to the rights of the libellant are not subordinate to them. * * * The Custodian's rights are unrelated to the forfeiture proceedings." (Emphasis supplied.)

But, unless subordinate, they must have been in opposition, and that would have been fatal (The Gray Jacket, supra, 371). And the vesting order itself—made a part of the petition filed by libellant through its Custodian—stipulated otherwise. It made the rights by capture strictly subordinate to the rights by forfeiture. It read (R. 31a):

"Nothing in this order shall be construed as recognizing that Claimants, or any of them, have any right, title or interest in said vessel. This order and all action taken pursuant thereto is in strict subordination to the rights of the United States including rights of forfeiture and salvage rights. It is the intention of this order to effect a complete substitution of the Alien Property Custodian for Claimants, and each of them, in respect of any right, title or interest they, or any of them, may have in any or all of said vessels." (Emphasis supplied.)

Since the asserted forfeiture title, when and if ultimately validated by decree, would relate back to, and have been in the Government, at all times since March 28, 1941, the date of the alleged offense creating such title, (Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 246, 311; Henderson's Distilled Spirits, 14 Wall. 44, 57; United States v. Stowell, 133 U. S. 1, 16; The Annandale, [C. A.] 2 P. D. 218, 220, affg. 2 P. D. 179, 185), there, of course, in that event, would have been no property capturable or captured by the libellant for enemy ownership on July 22, 1942. And the vesting order, recognizing that fact, as noted above, was conditioned accordingly. Libellant's brief in the Court of Appeals conceded that the capture was thus conditional upon the outcome of the forfeiture suit and could in no event become effective save in the event libellant failed to make good its forfeiture title. It read (p. 15 of libellant's Circuit Court brief):

"The Alien Property Custodian by his Vesting Order * * * acquired * * * only such right, title, and interest, if any, as would be held by the Italian owners-claimants, in the event the United States' claim to forfeiture is adjudged invalid." (Emphasis supplied.)

But the Court of Appeals, treating the claim of capture as unconditional and absolute, ruled, as to the vesting order, as follows (R.     ):

"This order unconditionally * * * divested claimants of all right, title and interest in the vessels and vested these in the Alien Property Custodian."

It is claimant's position that the Circuit Court erred in treating the Custodian otherwise than as a stranger to the litigation, at least until the Government's alleged title by forfeiture had been proved nonexistent; that at such time his claim of title might conceivably present a present, justiciable controversy, but not before (U. S. v. Hamb.-Am. Co., 239 U. S. 466, 475).

6. In that they determined libellant's new assertion in court of title by capture to be not open to inquiry by court or defense by claimant, and refused to hear, consider, or try claimant's defense, viz.: That such asserted capture had never been effected for want of property found, or found to be capturable as enemy property; and, if so, was beyond the putative captor's statutory and constitutional powers because said property was immune to capture, as being property to which the Trading with the Enemy Act was without application, as being property devoted to the service of, and under contract with, the sovereign United States, to whose safe-keeping for, and restoration, delivery and payment to claimant, the public faith was plighted, and as being property that consisted solely in and of a contractual obligation and debt, of the sovereign United States, whose capture would mean nothing less nor other than its repudiation.

If libellant's claim of capture for enemy ownership was properly to be treated as a present, subsisting claim, affecting the course of the pending controversy as to the validity of libellant's asserted title by forfeiture for crime, as the courts below held, then, claimant contends, it was his right to defend against such claim of title by capture, for the reason underlying assignment No. 1, supra, viz., that it was an assault in court against his property; and that such defense, if allowed, must prevail for three reasons, viz.: (a) That petitioner's property was not subject to the provisions of the Trading with the Enemy Act because covered by a contract with the sovereign of the United States, whereas that Act applied only to property involved in trade between private American citizens or residents and the enemy; use of the vessel under that sovereign contract constituted trade between the United States and petitioner; and, hence, suspended the war as to petitioner's property in the vessel and made it non-enemy property and petitioner quoad hoc an alien friend: (b) That no capture had in any event been effected, since, under the Trading with the Enemy Act (sec. 7(c), supra, 10 n.) and sec. 10 of Executive Order No. 9095, as amended, (supra, 12 n.), even if they were applicable here, a sine qua non of the exercise by the Custodian of his power of capture is a previous finding by him of the existence of an enemy interest to be captured, and he could not substitute for that prerequisite the possibility (discussed under Assignment 5, supra,) of a court's making such finding at some time in the future (Stoehr v. Wallace, 255 U. S. 239, 244-245; Hunter v. Central Union Trust Co., [D. C. S. D. N. Y.], 17 F. 2d 174, 175, 178): And (c) that, even had such a preliminary finding been made by the Custodian himself the capture of claimant's property in the "Aussa" was entirely beyond the Custodian's statutory and constitutional powers because, by virtue of the Idle Foreign Vessels Act and what was done thereunder, the public faith was plighted to the preservation for, and return, delivery and payment to petitioner, of said property or its value, with hire for its use; because its immunity to capture was implicitly required even by the Trading with the Enemy Act, if that was at all applicable; and because—petitioner's property thus consisting solely in and of the sovereign contractual obligation and debt of the United States—its capture would amount to a repudiation of a national obligation and debt of the sovereign itself, which the law both statutory and constitutional forbade.

Petitioner's property in the vessel "Aussa" had been, by virtue of statutory authority, in peace-time made the subject of a requisition demise or bare-boat charter, to be thereafter executed between the Government and claimant, and performed by the Government; had been thereunder taken over and into the possession, custody and control of the Government; and, following the outbreak of war, did pursuant to said statutory authority, remain in the possession of the Government, and did continue to be operated by the Government under, and in performance of, that requisition charter (Act of June 6, 1941, supra, 6 n.; Joint Resolution of June 16, 1942, c. 416, 56 Stat. 370*; Act of March 24, 1943, c. 26, sec. 3(c), 57 Stat. 49 †).

The requisition of the vessel (in peace-time) had been accompanied with the most solemn assurances that petitioner's property therein would be respected and restored in kind or value at the end of the requisition service, together with hire for its use in the meantime.

Petitioner's sole property in the "Aussa", following her said taking under said requisition charter, consisted thus in and of its contractual right to recover from the United States, and its correlative contractual obligation or debt to restore or pay to petitioner, at the end of the requisition charter, under the terms of the Act

"To extend certain Emergency laws relating to the Merchant Marine, and for other purposes.

"; * * * and all authority of the Commission transferred to the Administrator of the War Shipping Administration by the President's Executive Order of February 7, 1942 (numbered 9054; 7 Federal Register, 837) shall be performed by such Administrator in conformity with such Executive Order.

† The Act of March 24, 1943, c. 26, sec. 3(c), 57 Stat. 49, amending the Act of June 6, 1941, as amended, read as here pertinent as follows:

"(c) In the event that a vessel the title or use and possession of which is requisitioned or taken pursuant to Section 902 of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, or the Act of June 6, 1941 (Public Law 101, Seventy-seventh Congress), is in the custody of any Court, State or Federal, it shall be the duty of all agents and officers of the court having possession, custody, or control of said vessel, forthwith upon the filing with the clerk of said court of a certified copy of the order of requisitioning or taking, and without further order of the court, to comply with said requisitioning or taking and to permit the representatives of the United States Maritime Commission or the War Shipping Administration, as the case may be, to take possession, custody, and control of said vessel."

of June 6, 1941 (supra, 6 n.), its vessel in the same good order and condition she was in when taken, ordinary wear and tear excepted, (or in lieu thereof just compensation), and a just charter-hire for her use in the meantime. To capture claimant's property in the vessel, therefore, would be nothing other than to repudiate the sovereign's obligation to restore it and pay just compensation as aforesaid. But Congress never had purported to delegate such a power to the Executive; Congress on the contrary in the Trading with the Enemy Act (supra), even if here applicable, had denied it; and the general language of that Act would not warrant a contrary construction in view of the fact that, so construed, it would not only violate the Constitution, but also run counter to long and universally established principles of the law of nations. In war, private obligations or debts to enemy aliens may be sequestered or confiscated; not public.

7. In that they failed to hold and decree that even if claimant, by reason of libellant's claim of title by capture, had lost all right, title and interest in the "Aussa", it, nevertheless, still had a defensible interest in the litigation, entitling it to defend against the libel.

Below, libellant argued and the courts held that, after the alleged capture, not only was claimant without any property in the "Aussa", but that it had not even any defensible interest in the outcome of the litigation that would permit it further to defend against the libel. Said the District Court (R. 53a):

"This rule" (that an alien enemy may defend), "however, presupposes a defensible interest in the subject matter of the suit. This interest, in the immediate case, terminated upon the lawful seizure of the vessel by the petitioner" (Custodian);

and the Court of Appeals (R.       ):

“It is * * * right and proper that the Custodian be substituted in the libel proceeding for the claimant since the latter has been irrevocably divested of all his interests.”

But it was, and is, claimant's position that defense to a libel in rem is not necessarily restricted to one retaining title until trial: That, (1), title at time of seizure, particularly in a forfeiture suit, is a valid basis of defense, since in such a suit the prime question at issue is whether such seizure was lawful or tortious; if tortious, it is the owner as of the time of seizure who was injured and who is entitled, on defeat of the libel and non-issuance of a certificate of want of reasonable cause (R.S. 970; 28 U.S.C.A., sec. 818),* to sue, and recover damages from, the tort-feazor (Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 246, 314; The Appollon, 9 Wheat. 362, 367); and claimant here, it is not denied, was owner at the time of the “Aussa's” seizure and, it is not denied, still retains the interest of having the seizure pronounced unlawful to the end of recovering from the Collector, in another action, the damages it thereby sustained.

That, also, (2), avoidance of prospective loss or liability resulting from the success of such a forfeiture suit gives one, bearing a present or past contractual relationship to the res, an equally good right of defense, such

* This statute reads:

“When, in any prosecution commenced on account of the seizure of any vessel * * * made by any collector or other officer, under any act of Congress authorizing such seizure, judgment is rendered for the claimant, but it appears to the court that there was reasonable cause of seizure, the court shall cause a proper certificate thereof to be entered, and the claimant shall not, in such case, be entitled to costs, nor shall the person who made the seizure, nor the prosecutor, be liable to suit or judgment on account of such suit or prosecution: Provided, That the vessel * * * be, after judgment, forthwith returned to such claimant or his agent.”

as that of a bailee. That petitioner here is in such a position; for, if the forfeiture suit should succeed, not only would it lose its right to recover damages for a tortious seizure, as noted supra, but it also would lose the benefit of the continuing trusteeship of the alleged captor of its said property to meet the demands of its American creditors. If it should succeed in defeating the suit, such property would constitute such a trust, and, even though in captor hands, impose upon the captor the duty of satisfying pro tanto those demands (Trading with the Enemy Act, sec. 9a, supra, 11 n.; White v. Mechanics Securities Corp., 269 U. A. 283, 301; Markham v. Cabell, [U. S. Sup. Ct.], Adv. Op. No. 76, December 14, 1945); and from their burden, to the extent they were so satisfied, petitioner would be forever free. But, should the suit succeed, its American creditors would have no alternative but to proceed against it and its European assets, which alone would then be answerable for their satisfaction.

8. In that they failed to determine and decree that libellant, acting through the Custodian, could in no event be permitted to assume the defense against libellant's own suit to forfeit claimant's property, because of the identity of interest that, in respect to libellant's controversy with the Italian owner, would then obtain between attacker and defender.

It was and is claimant's position that the only result that could ensue from a substitution of libellant, as Custodian, for claimant, would be a loss of jurisdiction in the Court further to entertain the cause of forfeiture, at least as to the Italian owner's interest in the vessel; and that this necessary consequence of such a step is sufficient to condemn it. The Circuit Court of Appeals, however, considered such objection not valid, since, it held, a judicial controversy as to forfeiture would remain between libellant and third parties, if any, having liens against the vessel. It said (R.       ):

“Although the interests of the Custodian are not antagonistic to the United States as libellant, there is a justiciable case or controversy since third party interests * * * are determined by the decree.”

In so ruling, the Court was but following libellant's contention, which, as there urged (p. 18 of libellant's Circuit Court brief, was that:

“Even if there be an identity of interest status between the United States as libellant and the Alien Property Custodian as claimant, the United States is still entitled to final decrees of forfeiture against all other persons having or claiming any interests in the vessel, known or unknown, and whether now before the Court or not.”

This, claimant denied below and denies here; contending that the forfeiture provided for by the statute relied on in the libel (Act of June 15, 1917, supra, 4 n.) is not of any individual interests in the offending vessel, but of the vessel herself,—and, to be availed of under that statute, must be of all interests or none. That it would in any event be a strange and anomalous proceeding in which the Government should enforce a forfeiture only against presumably innocent mortgage, maritime, attachment and stipulation lien-holders and permit the only interest charged as an offender, the owning interest, to escape the penalty. That, under the statute, if any interests in the vessel are forfeited, all are,—and, too, as of the date of the alleged offense, March 28, 1941: That, if the Government, while enforcing a forfeiture against third persons, exonerated the owner therefrom, it could only be by way of remission of a penalty already incurred; but that such remission could be lawfully granted, if at all, only by the Secretary of the Treasury after a finding by him of the owner's innocence of the very charge leveled against it in the libel (Act of June 17, 1930, c. 497, Title IV, secs. 616, 617, 618; 46 Stat 757; 19 U. S. C. A., secs. 1616, 1617, 1618;* 35 Op. Atty.-Gen. 15); and that, so far as the record shows, that official has never here attempted to exercise such a power.

9. In that they failed to determine and decree that, at least on striking claimant's appearance, the District Court had lost all jurisdictional power to do anything further in the cause save to dismiss the same for want of jurisdiction.

The basis of the foregoing assignment is claimant's contention that the striking of the appearance of a party who has appeared in response to a citation has the legal effect of recalling the citation and depriving the court of jurisdiction ab initio.

10. In that they failed to determine and decree that the District Court had failed to acquire jurisdiction over the cause because of the want of a statute authorizing the forfeiture of title asserted in the libel.

This is based upon claimant's contention that the Act of June 15, 1917, Title II, sec. 3 (supra, 4 n.), relied on in the libel as authorizing the alleged forfeiture, was without operative force or effect on March 28, 1941. The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals had so held in Marchese v. United States, 126 F. 2d 671, 673, in which ruling it had been followed by the Third Circuit Court in Scaleggeri v. United States, 126 F. 2d 1023. But below the latter Court, reversing itself, chose to follow the Maryland District Court decision to the contrary announced in United States v. The Pietro Campanella, 44 F. Supp. 348, 351-352.

11. In that they failed to determine and decree that the District Court had failed to acquire jurisdiction over the cause by reason of the want of any allegation in the libel charging the commission of the only offense named in said statute as a ground of forfeiture.

This is based upon claimant's contention that the libel alleges only willful damage to the vessel and permission to put it to the use named as unlawful in the statute; that the libel alleges no such actual use; and that it is only such actual use that the statute, when effective, makes a ground of forfeiture (supra, 4 n.).

12. In that they failed to determine and decree that the District Court had lost all jurisdiction over the cause when the libellant, in the midst of litigating its claim that the "Aussa" was its own vessel by reason of forfeiture, requisitioned it as the property of claimant and removed it from the Court's custody.

This is based upon claimant's contention (1) that the District Court, in permitting the libellant to avail itself in peace-time of the new remedy of requisition provided by the Act of June 6, 1941, (supra, 6 n.), which, when availed of, in itself nullified the jurisdiction of that Court, was bound by the terms and conditions imposed by that Act, and could not at its own will reject those and prescribe new terms and conditions of its own, less inimical to libellant's position in the pénal litigation it was then engaged in conducting against the vessel so requisitioned; nor for the sake of that litigation, keep alive a jurisdiction that the Act, when availed of, terminated.

The order of the District Court, in prescribing those new terms and conditions, provided that the requisition use of the "Aussa" under the Idle Foreign Vessels Act, should be

"without prejudice to the continued custody of this" (the District) "Court over said vessel or to the rights of any of the parties libellant in the pending proceeding, or under said Act of June 6, 1941 * * * (R. 17a).

The Court of Appeals, in upholding the District Court's right to impose such new terms and conditions, pointed to the Maritime Commission's Notice of Taking (requisition order) as its justification, saying (R. )::

“The requisition orders expressly stated that they were without prejudice to the rights of the United States under any executive seizure of or forfeiture proceedings against said vessel[s] heretofore or hereafter effected or instituted.”

In so saying, the Circuit Court was contradicting the record itself, which showed the requisition order to contain no such condition (R. 23a), and, instead, an unconditional promise that “Compensation for such taking will be determined and made in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid Act” (Idle Foreign Vessels Act).

The Circuit Court also referred to Executive Order No. 8771 as authorizing the Maritime Commission to prescribe such new terms and conditions (R. n.). Here again the learned Court attributed to the alleged source of authority words by it never uttered. That Order (supra, 13), in its section 3, imposed upon the Maritime Commission the unconditional duty of paying “just compensation”. The “terms and conditions” that, under sections 1 and 2 of that Order the Maritime Commission was authorized to prescribe, thus clearly related to matters quite other than “just compensation”.

Hence, we see, the President never purported to bestow authority upon the Maritime Commission to impose such new terms and conditions as those we here discuss; and the Maritime Commission, we see, never purported to impose them. It was the District Court, and that alone, which undertook to prescribe them. But it, claimant urged below as it urges here, possessed no power to do so.

Claimant urged that such new terms and conditions were without force or effect; and that the requisition, accordingly, constituted an abandonment of the Government's forfeiture claims, and entailed a loss of the court's jurisdiction. Claimant's contention was accepted in neither court, however, the Circuit Court dismissing it as "as mere play upon words" (R.       ).

The assignment of error is also (2) predicated upon claimant's contention that removal of the res from the District Court's custody, both actual and constructive, pursuant to requisition, deprived the court of its jurisdiction in keeping with the plain intent and purpose of the Act. Neither court accepted this contention; and the Court of Appeals based its dismissal thereof upon three grounds, viz.: (a) That removal of the res from the court's custody was without prejudice to the continuance of its in rem jurisdiction because the court had said it should be so; (b) that the master was appointed by the court's marshal and the res never left the court's custody and control; and (c) that, in any event, the just compensation provided for by the Act of June 6, 1941, constituted a substitute res, as would a stipulation for value filed in court (R.       ), and that, thus, the Act, instead of purposing the end of the District Court's jurisdiction over the requisitioned vessel, meant, and provided means, to save it.

All three grounds, claimant urges, are untenable: The first two not only because inconsistent with the Act of June 6, 1941, (supra, 6 n.), as amended (supra, 28 n.), and with the inherent nature of the court's in rem jurisdiction, but also because violative of the express terms of the statute (Act of June 17, 1930, c. 497, Title IV, sec. 605; 46 Stat. 754, 19 U.S.C.A. 1605)* made controlling by

* The cited section reads, as pertinent:

"All vessels * * * seized under the provisions of the customs laws * * * unless otherwise provided by law, shall be placed and remain in the custody of the collector for the district in which the seizure was made to await disposition according to law." (Emphasis added.)

the act alleged in the libel to have authorized the forfeiture (supra, 4 n.); and the third, because the manifest purpose of the Act of June 6, 1941, (supra, 6 n.), was to destroy, not save the jurisdiction, and to provide new remedies for those extinguished (Johnson v. Fleet Corp., 280 U. S. 320, 326; Brady v. Roosevelt S.S. Co., 317 U. S. 575, 579). So far from providing a substitute res to be availed of in the action against the requisitioned vessel, the Act, in prescribing just compensation, itself provides that the owner, to recover such as he claims, must begin a new action in the Court of Claims; and holders of liens and stipulations, to recover such as they claim, new actions in the District Court; and it leaves no res in court or elsewhere to abide the outcome of the pending action, either to be exonerated and restored to those parties or to be forfeited and either (if still unbonded) condemned, sold, and distributed as provided in sec. 613 of the Act of June 17, 1930, supra, (46 Stat. 756; 19 U.S.C.A. 1613),† or (if

District Court, as to call for an exercise of this Court's power of supervision as follows:

It has, in its disposition of the first to fifth questions inclusive (supra, 17-19), deprived, and sanctioned the District Court's depriving, petitioners of their property without a hearing and in defiance of the applicable guaranties of due process.

It has, in its disposition of the second question (supra, 18), permitted, and sanctioned the District Court's permitting respondent Government to maintain in court, at one and the same time, two utterly inconsistent positions and remedies, and by means of its assertion of one to bar petitioners from contesting its assertion of the other.

It has, in its disposition of the first, third and fourth questions (supra, 17, 18), denied petitioners the right of urging against a judicial remedy based upon capture for enemy ownership the defense that there had never been such a capture and that, if so, the same had exceeded the alleged captor's statutory and constitutional powers.

It has, in disposing of the sixth question (supra, 19), permitted respondent Government both to maintain and defend against its own suit and conduct both sides of one and the same litigation.

It has, in disposing of the sixth and seventh questions (supra, 19-20), purported to exercise a jurisdiction denied it alike by principles of due process and positive statutory command.

III. The decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals is in conflict with the decision of other Circuit Courts of Appeals as follows: With that of the Fifth Circuit Court (Marchese v. United States, 126 F. 2d 671, 673) regarding the operative force and effect, as of March 30, 1941, of section 3 of Title II of the Act of June 15, 1917.

IV. The Circuit Court of Appeals, in disposing of the first, third and fourth questions (supra), has attributed to respondent Government an invulnerability to defense, in its pursuit of judicial remedy, that is in conflict with this Court's applicable decisions in McVeigh v. United States, supra, Windsor v. McVeigh, supra, and cases following them, and with Hirabayashi v. United States, supra, and kindred cases; and has decided questions that have never been but should be decided by this Court, viz.: (1) Whether property of an alien enemy covered by contract with, and in the possession of, the sovereign United States, nor engaged in trade with any of the citizens thereof, is subject to the terms of the Trading with the Enemy Act; (2) whether property of an alien enemy engaged in lawful intercourse, authorized not by mere license but by contract with the United States, is immune to capture by the latter even under the Trading with the Enemy Act; (3) whether property deposited with the Federal Government by an alien friend in time of peace under an agreement for the ultimate restoration of the same or its value, with compensation for its use in the meantime, becomes, even under that Act, subject to capture on the subsequent outbreak of war between the Federal Government and the Government of such alien friend; and (4) whether, be that Act applicable or not, the sovereign obligations and debts of the Federal Government, contracted to private men, for value received therefrom, in time of peace, may thereafter, when such men have become enemies by reason of the outbreak of war between the Federal Government and their own, be captured and repudiated.

V. The Circuit Court of Appeals, in disposing of the seventh question, has decided a question that has never been but should be decided by this Court, viz., whether section 3 of Title II of the Act of June 15, 1917, (40 Stat. 220), is effective at all times or only in times of emergency and, in the latter event, when and under what circumstances it became effective in connection with the second World War.

VI. The Circuit Court of Appeals, in disposing of the seventh question, has decided a question that has never been but should be decided by this Court, viz., whether the Idle Foreign Vessels Act (Act of Congress of June 6, 1941; 55 Stat. 242), when availed of by the Federal Government to requisition and take possession of vessels in course of being proceeded against in Admiralty in rem actions, including forfeiture suits, destroys the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Courts further to proceed in the same.

VII. The fate of numerous vessels and vessel-titles depends upon the correct solution of the questions raised in this record, argued below and here presented. This case might, indeed, justly be entitled "The Italian Mercantile Marine." The record shows (R. 32a-42a) twenty-nine cases pending in various District Courts of the United States in which the facts and issues are in all substantial respects identical with those here involved. But there the uniformity ends. The Courts have manifested a wide divergence of judicial viewpoint in severally disposing there of the issues presented here. In brief, it may be said that five types of decision have evolved, viz.: (1) Denial of the Custodian's petition in all respects, with leave merely to intervene granted to that official but so far unavailed of, as typified by the decisions in the District Courts for the Western District of Oregon and the Southern District of Texas respectively, in The Leme (unreported) and The Mongioia (unreported), a Certified Copy of the order in the second of which, in the absence of opinions, is here exhibited;* (2) acceptance

Galveston Division

A. D. No. 1753

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

Libellant,

Italian Steamship "Mongioia," her engines, etc.,

This matter having come on regularly before the Court upon the petition of Leo T. Crowley, Alien Property Custodian of the United States, to be substituted as a party in place of the claimant, verified the 28th day of July, 1942, and upon the stipulation of proctors for all parties that the cause might be submitted upon briefs to be exchanged by them, and such briefs having subsequently been filed, and the Court having filed its Memorandum Opinion herein on the 20th day of February, 1943, and being now fully advised in the premises:

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the petition of the said Alien Property Custodian to be substituted as a party in the place of claimant be and the same is denied, but that the Alien Property Custodian may and he is allowed to intervene herein, and may, from time to time, by intervention, present to the Court such matters as he deems necessary to protect the particular interests of the Government in his charge.

ENDORSEMENTS: A. D. No. 1783 In the District Court of the United States for the Southern District of Texas, Galveston Division of Texas, Galveston Division, United States of America, Libellant versus Italian Steamship "Mongioia," her Engines, etc. Respondent. ORDER OF COURT, DENYING PETITION OF ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN TO BE SUBSTITUTED AS A PARTY IN THE PLACE OF CLAIMANT. Filed 2 day of April, 1943 Hal V. Watts, Clerk by K. S. Evans, Deputy.

Southern District of Texas } ss.:

I, HAL V. WATTS, Clerk of the United States District Court in and for the Southern District of Texas, do hereby certify that the annexed and foregoing of the Custodian's claim of capture, but denial of his demand for substitution, as typified by the decisions in the District Courts for the District of Maryland (The Pietro Campanella, 47 F. Supp. 374) and the Eastern District of New York (The San Leonardo, 51 F. Supp. 107); (3) denial of all jurisdiction ab initio, as required by the ruling of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in Marchese v. United States, supra; (4) denial of all jurisdiction after requisition and attempted capture, the position assumed in the District Court for the District of New Jersey and reversed below; and (5) complete compliance with the Custodian's demand, the position assumed by the District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and affirmed below. But except in the latter two Districts, no decrees as yet have been or could be entered,—in the opinion of counsel,—possessed of the necessary degree of finality to permit appeal, which must there await accordingly the entry of a decree following a dismissal or trial of the forfeiture suit in each District.

Nothing but a decision of this Court can finally determine, according to one controlling rule, the private and public rights and obligations there and here involved; not even a treaty between the interested sovereigns, since no treaty, any more than a legislative act, can save a con-now remaining among the records of the said Court in my office.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed the seal of the aforesaid court at Galveston this 3rd day of March, 1945.

stitutional sovereign from constitutional obligation, or barter or cut off right that his constitution assures to private men.

In this situation, it would seem to be more than ordinarily appropriate, even apart from the high considerations of justice otherwise here present, that this Court act favorably upon the petition here presented, and consent to a review of the proceedings had below, to the end that the true rule of decision applicable to all the foregoing cases be speedily and authoritatively settled, uniformity and certainty introduced where widespread diversity and doubt now prevail, and a mass of otherwise unnecessary and wasteful litigation thus averted.

Wherefore, your petitioners respectively pray that writs of certiorari be issued by this Honorable Court in the above-entitled causes to the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, requiring the latter to certify the said respective causes to this Honorable Court to the end that the questions involved therein may here receive due attention and consideration, and that the decrees respectively entered therein by the said Circuit Court may be reversed accordingly.

BRIEF IN SUPPORT OF PETITION

A*Introductory Statements*1*Report* of Opinions Below

The opinion of the Court of Appeals, announcing its decision of affirmance, is reported in 153 F. 2d 138. No opinion was delivered by it on its denial of the petition for a rehearing.

The opinion of the District Court is reported in 52 F. Supp. 927.

2*Basis of Jurisdiction

The basis of this Court's jurisdiction is set forth in the Petition (supra, 17).

3*Specifications of Error

Petitioner's * specifications of error are set out in the Petition (supra, 20-39).

B*Summary of Argument †

Petitioner was entitled under the guaranties of due process to defend its property when assailed, as it here was, in court (Const., 5th Am'd't.; McVeigh v. United

* The term "petitioner" as used herein, refers to the petitioner "Italia"—Societa Anonima di Navigazione not only for itself, but as typical and representative of all the petitioners respectively in the other above-entitled causes, on behalf of all of whom this brief is submitted.

† For the fully developed argument the Court is respectfully referred to the First to Fifth Points inclusive in Petitioners' Brief filed herewith in The Antoinetta, No. here.

States, 11 Wall. 259; Windsor v. McVeigh, 93 U. S. 274, 278; Watts, Watts & Co. v. Unione Austriaca, etc., 248 U. S. 9, 22; Petitioner's Brief filed herewith in The Antoinetta, No. , pp. 55-66). This right it was denied, though it had been cited to appear and defend, its appearance and proffered defense were rejected and itself driven from court and adjudged and decreed to be without any property right in the res it had sought to defend as its own.

The theory upon which the lower courts proceeded was (1) that a claimant's right to a trial of its defense of title to a res against the Federal Government's asserted forfeiture title does not survive a valid determination by the court adverse to its title; (2) that here the court had made a determination adverse to its title by finding that the same either had been forfeited for crime on March 28, 1941, or had been captured for enemy ownership on July 22, 1942; (3) that, therefore, petitioner here had no right to a trial of its defense of title.

The prime trouble with that reasoning is that, in making the determination referred to in the second premise, the court assumed that it could validly make, and had validly made, such determination without a trial. The court thus begged the whole question, by assuming the very thing to be proved. Its reasoning amounted to no more than this: Petitioner was entitled to no trial of its defense of title, because without a trial the court had found it had no title to defend.

Petitioner was entitled to a trial of its defense of title to the res against both adverse claims asserted in court, that of forfeiture for crime and that of capture for enemy ownership, (cases cited, supra, 50-51). But neither claim could be tried save at the appropriate time (U. S. v. Hamb.-Am. Co., 239 U. S. 466, 475). If the court had jurisdiction, the time was appropriate for the trial of the asserted forfeiture title. But there could be no appropriate time for trial of the claim of title by capture until, in any event, the claim of title by forfeiture was out of the way (The Sally, 8 Cranch. 382, 384; The Hampton, 5 Wall. 372, 376; The Gray Jacket, 5 Wall. 370, 371). For the two claims were utterly inconsistent and could not be asserted at one and the same time: One and the same party could not at once occupy the two irreconcilable positions (Flanigan v. Turner, 66 U. S. 491; Scholey v. Rew, 23 Wall. 331, 351; Railway Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258, 267-268; Hopkins v. Grimshaw, 165 U. S. 342, 357; Pease v. Rathbun-Jones Eng. Co., 243 U. S. 273, 277; Norfolk Southern R. R. Co. v. Chatman, 244 U. S. 276, 281-282); nor pursue the two irreconcilable remedies (Van Winkle v. Crowell, 146 U. S. 42, 50-51; Robb v. Vos, 155 U. S. 13, 41-43; Stuart v. Hayden, 169 U. S. 1, 15; and United States v. Oregon Lumber Co., 260 U. S. 290, 294-295). Here, the only event in which the claim of title by forfeiture could be out of the way prior to its trial, was the District Court's want of jurisdiction over that claim. The District Court was without jurisdiction over that claim (Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 111-126). The court was, therefore, at once in a position to pass upon the claim of title by capture.

That claim of title by capture was bad on the face of the record for several reasons, viz.: (1) It was bad on the face of the record because that showed that petitioner's property in the "Aussa" had from and after a time anterior to the outbreak of war been engaged, and at the time of the alleged capture was still engaged in lawful trade not with private American citizens under the revocable permission of a license, but, instead, with the United States Government under the irrevocable permission of a vested contract right authorized by Congress and concluded with the sovereign United States itself, whereunder as to that property the war was suspended, that property was non-enemy property and petitioner quoad hoc an alien friend (Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 66-70),—and whereunder the petitioner's property was to be respected and restored, either in kind or in value, at the conclusion of the contract service, together with hire for its use in the meantime (Idle Foreign Vessels Act, supra, 6 n.); that the Trading with the Enemy Act (supra, 10 n.) was in no event applicable, since that Act was designed to cover property engaged or held in private trade by private citizens, not that engaged or held under public contractual relations between the American sovereign and its enemy owner (S. Repts. Nos. 111, 113, pp. 1, 10-11, 15, 16, 18, 19, 65th Cong., 1st Sess.; Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 66-70); and that, if applicable, that Act by necessary implication granted immunity to enemy property engaged in such public intercourse and under such a sovereign contract (Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 71-83). (2) It was bad on the face of the record because that showed that the only property petitioner possessed in the res at the time of the alleged capture consisted in and of the sovereign contractual obligation or debt of the United States to restore the vessel, in kind or value, to petitioner at the close of the requisition service with just charter hire for its use in the meantime (R. 23a; Const., 5th Am'd't.; Act of June 6, 1941, supra, 6 n.): And it was not in the statutory or constitutional power of the Federal Government to capture the sovereign's own contractual obligation or debt, for to attempt such a thing was nothing more nor less than to attempt its repudiation; which was forbidden, not only because Congress could not authorize it (Const., 14th Am'd't., sec. 4; Perry v. United States, 294 U. S. 330, 352, 353, 379-380; Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 84-90), but also because Congress had not authorized it even in the Act relied on by the would-be captor (Trading with the Enemy Act, supra, 10 n.; Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 66-99). (3) It was bad on the face of the record because that showed the vessel res to be a deposit which was accepted on the public faith by the Federal Government from petitioner in peace-time and to the return of which, in kind or value, with hire for its use in the meantime, the public faith was plighted; and that, therefore, despite the ensuing war, it was immune to capture, as was that public faith to repudiation (Const., 14th Am'd't, sec. 4; Perry v. United States, supra; Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 66-99). (4) It was bad on the face of the record because that showed that the alleged captor had found no property in the res that was subject to capture and, instead, left to the court the determination whether there was any such (R. 28a, 30a; Stoeck v. Wallace, 255 U. S. 239, 244-245; Hunter v. Central Union Trust Co., [D. C., S. D. N. Y.], 17 F. 2d 174, 175, 178; Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 100-102).

The reasoning of the court, as expounded supra (51), also was fallacious in that its first premise,—that is, that petitioner's right to a trial of its defense of title did not survive a determination by the court adverse to its title,—was insupportable unless limited in its terms to the case of a determination by the court (1) that petitioner's title had been lost prior to seizure of the res for forfeiture; and (2) that, when so lost, it had carried with it every legally valuable benefit petitioner might thereafter otherwise reap from an adjudication that such seizure was tortious, or at least unsustainable. For, (a), so long as petitioner held title at the time of that seizure, it was petitioner who was thereby damaged and possessed the right to sue the seizer for damages if such seizure was tortious and, therefore, possessed the right to prove such seizure tortious; which could be proved nowhere else than in the trial of the claim of title by forfeiture and not otherwise than by the defeat of that claim (Gelston v. Hoyt, 3 Wheat. 246, 314; The Apollon, 9 Wheat. 362, 367; United States v. 422 Casks of Wine, 1 Pet. 547, 549-550; Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 103-106). And, (b), so long as petitioner, despite such loss of title, would, from a defeat of the asserted forfeiture title, reap, by reason of the very fact of its quondam title, a legally valuable benefit, it was its right to seek that defeat and save that benefit (The Beaconsfield, 158 U. S. 303, 307; Pendleton v. Benner Line, 246 U. S. 353, 356; The Kaiser Wilhelm II [C. C. A., 3rd Cir.], 247 Fed. 786, 789; Queenan v. Mays [C. C. A., 10th Cir.], 90 F. 2d 525, 534-535; The Regina del Mare, Br. & L. 315, 316; Chipman v. City of Hartford, 21 Conn. 488, 498; Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 106-108). And such a benefit petitioner, if it succeeded in defeating the asserted forfeiture title, was in a position here to preserve, viz., the continued trusteeship of the alleged captor of the res for the benefit of petitioner's American creditors and, to the extent their claims were so satisfied, its own freedom from any and all further personal liability therefor (Trading with the Enemy Act, sec. 9(a), supra, 11; White v. Mechanics Securities Corp., 269 U. S. 283, 301; Markham v. Cabell (U. S. Sup. Ct.), Adv. Op. No. 76, Dec. 14, 1945).

The Alien Property Custodian in no event had any right to succeed to the defense of petitioner's claim of title because the former was but an agent of the libellant, and to permit him to defend was but to permit the libellant to defend against libellant's own suit (Banco Mexicano v. Deutsche Bank, 263 U. S. 591, 603; Becker Co. v. Cummings, 296 U. S. 74, 78; Cummings v. Deutsche Bank, 300 U. S. 115, 118). Such identity of interest must at once destroy the court's jurisdiction to try the cause, at least as against petitioner's property therein (Lord v. Veazie, 8 How. 251; Cleveland v. Chamberlain, 66 U. S. 419; Wood-Paper Co. v. Heft, 8 Wall. 333; Globe & Rutgers Fire Ins. Co. v. Hines [C. C. A., 2d Cir.], 273 Fed. 774, 777, 778).

The Circuit Court, apparently conceding as much, nevertheless held that such loss of jurisdiction to try libellant's asserted forfeiture title to petitioner's property in the res, would still leave at least some controversy within the court's jurisdiction, viz., such controversy as might develop between third-person mortgage, maritime, attachment and stipulation lien-holders, if any, on the one hand, and libellant on the other. But herein the court erred: For (1) the statute (Act of June 15, 1917, Title II, sec. 3, supra, 4 n.), relied on as authorizing the forfeiture, authorized only the forfeiture of the res, not of specific interests therein; (2) it did not authorize the forfeiture of the liens of prestumably innocent third persons and the remission of the penalty to the only interest charged with its violation, to-wit, the owning interest; and (3) so to enforce it against the former and withhold its enforcement against the latter, would violate the law giving power of remission to the Secretary of the Treasury alone, and that, too, only on his first finding the absence of the very criminality charged in the libel (Act of June 17, 1930, c. 497, Title IV, secs. 616-618, supra, 33 n.). The substitution of libellant in petitioner's role of claimant would defeat the court's jurisdiction, not merely over a part, but over the whole, of the forfeiture cause (Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 109-110).

The court's want of jurisdiction to try the Federal Government's asserted forfeiture title, which alone, as pointed out supra (51-52), could confer upon it a present jurisdiction to try the Government's asserted captor's title, was due (1) to the libel's alleging, as the statute authorizing forfeiture, one without force or effect at the time of the offense charged in the libel; (2) to the libel's alleging, as the offense giving rise to the alleged forfeiture title, one not made by that statute a ground of forfeiture; (3) to the Government's requisitioning the res as petitioner's property, and not its own,—after it had filed its libel on the contrary theory,—and in connection with said requisition, availed itself of a statute designed to destroy the court's jurisdiction and thereby subscribed to terms and conditions inconsistent with the further exercise thereof, from the effect and prejudice of which terms and conditions the District Court was powerless to relieve it; and (4) to libellant's depriving the court of custody of the res so requisitioned and thereby destroying the only basis of jurisdiction upon which the court was authorized to proceed with the in rem cause (Antoinetta Brief supra, pp. 111-126).

ON PETITION FOR WRITS OF CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE THIRD

MEMORANDUM FOR THE UNITED STATES AND THE ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN IN OPPOSITION

The opinion of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit (R. 135-143) is reported at 153 F. (2d) 138. The opinions of the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey in the cases of the Aussa (R. 76a-82a) and the Brennero (R. 87a-91a) are reported at 52 F. Supp. 927 and 53 F. Supp. 441, respectively, but in the cases of the Arsa (R. 83a-84a) and the Alberta (R. 85a-86a) are not reported.

The four judgments of the Circuit Court of Appeals were entered on December 21, 1945 (R. 149-152). A petition for rehearing (R. 157-185) was denied by four orders entered on February 13, 1946 (R. 188-192). The petition for writs of certiorari were filed on April 30, 1946. The jurisdiction of the Court is invoked under Section 240 (a) of the Judicial Code, as amended by the Act of February 13, 1925.

These proceedings are substantially identical with Nos. 1172-1175, now pending on petition for writs of certiorari. The respondents herein filed a brief in opposition to the petition in those cases to which the attention of the Court is respectfully invited. For the reasons therein stated, we submit that the petition in the instant cases should likewise be denied.

J. HOWARD McGRATH,
Solicitor General.

RAOUL BERGER,
General Counsel to the Alien Property Custodian, Of Counsel
